[2025] EWHC 3064 (KB)

Nick represented former F1 race driver Felipe Massa, successfully resisting in main part the Defendants' attempt to strike out or obtain reverse summary judgment in respect to Mr Massa's claim concerning an alleged conspiracy by the Defendants to conceal knowledge that Nelson Piquet Jnr's crash at the 2008 Singapore Grand Prix was deliberate and to not investigate it until after it was too late to change the results.

FA Regulatory Commission, July 2025

Nick represented the Brazilian international and West Ham United football player, Lucas Paquetá, in relation to four FA Rule E5 charges of spot-fixing in Premier League matches in what is understood to be the longest FA case in its history. The FA alleged Mr Paquetá deliberately obtained yellow cards in four different Premier League matches in order to help others win bets on football.

The Regulatory Commission found all four spot-fixing charges not proven and dismissed them, while it upheld two charges of breach of FA Rule 3 relating to the failure to provide information when required.

The Football Association v. Accrington Stanley FC

FA Appeal Board, July 2025

The Commission had found that the word “engage” meant a Club entering into an arrangement with a person to perform agency services, whereas the FA argued for a more broader meaning to include any discussion or involvement with a person who was not an agent.

The Appeal Board dismissed The FA’s appeal, referring to important principles of interpretation of sporting rules that focus on what the rules as drafted meant according to normal principles of construction and not what bodies like The FA might have wanted them to mean (see paragraphs 26-27). A copy of their written reasons is available here.

Nick is leading counsel (along with junior, Ravi Mehta) acting for the football players’ union, the PFA, with respect to the Premier League’s proposed player salary cap. FA Regulatory Commission, July 2024

Nick acted for the first 3 Participants (two football agents/agencies and the former Premier League and England international player, Gareth Barry) in regulatory proceedings concerning allegations of agents having a prohibited interest in a football club.

The case is significant because the Commission dismissed the charge of secondary liability against all Participants as it found FA Rule E.9, prohibiting agreements or attempts to breach other Rules, was limited to breaches of other FA Rules, and not FA regulations such as the Intermediaries Regulations (see [86] – [100]). In addition, the Commission ruled that FA Intermediary Regulation E8(i), providing a Participant must disclose to The FA a prohibited agreement within 10 days, did not apply to Mr Power as he was not a Participant when he entered the prohibited agreement [80].

The Commission had found that the word "engage" meant a Club entering into an arrangement with a person to perform agency services, whereas the FA argued for a more broader meaning to include any discussion or involvement with a person who was not an agent.

The Appeal Board dismissed The FA's appeal, referring to important principles of interpretation of sporting rules that focus on what the rules as drafted meant according to normal principles of construction and not what bodies like The FA might have wanted them to mean (see paragraphs 26-27).
